

When the Nintendo Wii console was released in 2006 it became a worldwide bestseller within months of its release. The basic idea behind it was simple, get players to physically move to the rhythm of the game rather than clicking on buttons. The system's design also focused on four basic human emotions; joy, anger, fear and sadness (a fifth emotion, surprise is introduced later). Games like Wii Sports could be played using just one hand while holding another controller in your other hand with your thumb-push motion for movement control. Wii Sports Resort takes everything that made Wii Sports popular and perfects it. The motion sensor in the Wii Remote and Nunchuk controller has been updated and now can use a wider area of movement. The new Wii Motion Plus accessory, designed in the form of a small expansion pack, adds greater precision and accuracy to the device. Certain games also incorporate balance boards; players stand on these to make it easier to control their character's movements such as Donkey Kong's barrel rolls (Left-Right) or Kirby's foot stomps (Up-Down). Wii Sports Resort contains 20 full motion videos (FMV) games that feature locations around a resort. The games are split into two categories: sports games and action/challenge games. Each sport has a selection of events, which must be unlocked during play by achieving certain scores or by completing the previous event, while the action/challenge games do not have events. As usual, players can play one-player against other characters in VS mode or two-player in co-operative play. Many of these activities are controlled with the Wii Remote only while others utilize both the Wii Remote and Nunchuk. In sports games, players attempt to reach a certain target score or goal within a specific period of time for each event. The player's performance in each event is rated from 'Poor' to 'Excellent' and by completing different numbers of events, the player can unlock other events. The player must have an active Mii character to be able to play the sports games. Or if they want a custom-made character, they can create their own Mii and use that instead. Players can choose any Mii from their Wii Address Book or one of their previously created characters from Wii Sports or Wii Sports Resort. In contrast to other sports games however there are no official teams that the player will represent, only the players themselves. In challenge games the player must complete a certain challenge. Each challenge has a specific objective and goal and can be completed in different ways. The player's performance is rated from 'Poor' to 'Excellent'. If the player gets an Excellent on all challenges of a certain type, they will unlock either a sports game or another set of challenges. Wii Sports Resort includes 5 sports:

"Wii Sports Resort" offers additional downloadable content (DLC) via the Nintendo Wi-Fi Connection, which are available in Wii points.
